

EQUILIBRIUM

Little Mark

Season 1 • Episode 2

Ten Reviews, Zero Runs

A story about reading, choosing, and one small test.

Meet the characters

MARK (40)

He wants to go running.
First he wants to pick the perfect shoes.

LITTLE MARK (9)

Mark when he was nine.
He already has his sneakers on.

MR. FEED

He lives in the phone.
Always has one more review for you.

How to read this comic

-  Grey pages: PART 1, the version society sells you.
-  Warm pages: PART 2, the version that works.
-  At the end: a log you can fill in for one week.

Researching feels like progress. It isn't the run.

Good enough + a small test > perfect + never

↺ Let's rewind and try again...

A small test beats a perfect plan.

My one-week test log

Pick one thing you keep researching. Each evening, fill in one column.

Name: _____ Start date: _____

	Day 1	Day 2	Day 3	Day 4	Day 5	Day 6	Day 7
RESEARCHING the thing I keep reading about SMALLEST TEST what I can try today, small
WHAT HAPPENED what really happened
NEXT ADJUSTMENT one thing I change next time

After 7 days

What did one small test teach you that more reading would not have?

For the grown-ups reading along

This story is about one idea: reading about something can feel like doing it, but it isn't. A good-enough guess plus a small test teaches you more than a perfect plan you never try. AI can compare the options; choosing and trying is still our job.

Questions to talk about together

1. What is something you keep reading or asking about, but have not tried yet?
2. What is the smallest way to try it this week?
3. After you try it: what happened, and what would you change next time?